

P R E S E N T S

MODULE 5A

Inevitable Success

How do you go about creating inevitable success. It's one of the most important concepts I've ever discovered. It's the next evolution of Goal Setting. It's about creating the conditions so success becomes INEVITABLE. So that success happens automatically.

Here's an example: If you want to start going to the gym every day, one thing you can do is find an accountability partner that physically shows up at your doorstep, expecting you to go. This makes success much more like than just setting the goal of going to the gym.

How can you set up conditions in your life so that the outcomes you want in your personal and professional life become inevitable?

Lets assess how you manage your time. If you answer this honestly you will find out how efficient you are.

Are you looking at your key results and major opportunities assessment? Are you aware of where you should focus in order to get the most results from your efforts?

How about whether your physical appearance and presentation is up to scratch? If it is not then you may end up losing time, money and resources because you are not acting appropriately in the environment.

Make sure to incorporate something physical, emotional, and mental. What would you need to focus on? Who would you need to meet? Remember to include on-ramps and off-ramps. Every 90 days, review this and tweak as necessary.

Finally, let's talk about setting up your physical environment for maximum creativity and productivity. Some people like to create brand new things, others are creative by taking an existing system to the next level.

There's a lot of factors to your physical environment. Either work standing up, as I do, or get a high quality ergonomic chair. Get a nice big monitor. Make sure your keyboard and mouse are in positions that don't create stress in your wrists, arms, etc. Turn off alerts that tell you when you have new email or voicemail.

Make a list of the things you can do to create your environment for optimum creativity and productivity.

Are you making maximum use of your resources in terms of your staff and those you outsource to.

Next, let's look at creating your ideal day. Look at the biggest goals you have for the next 10-50 years, and look at what you want to accomplish over the next 3-12 months that support that. Then look at what kind of day would support getting these shorter term goals met.